NORWAY BREAKS
WITH SWEDEN

Storthing Passes Resolution
Formally Severing the Dual Union.

KING OSCAR ENTERS A PROTEST

Claim Is Made That Action of the Assembly Is Contrary to the Provisions of the Constitution, Which Demand United Action.

Christiania cablegram: Norway on Wednesday declared herself a sovereign state, dissolved the union with Sweden, and proclaimed Oscar II no longer king of Norway.

Pending the selection of a new king a provisional government has been formed.

Norway has asked King Oscar to permit one of his sons to become king of Norway. It is believed King Oscar will refuse. In that event Prince Waldemar, third son of the king of Denmark, may be chosen.

King Oscar has telegraphed a most emphatic protest at Norway's act of secession, and it is understood has summoned the Swedish parliament to meet in extraordinary session on June 26.

Norway Ready for War.
Norway is prepared to take up arms, if need be, to defend her newly declared independence from Sweden.

At a second session of the storthing a proclamation to the people of Norway was adopted, citing in detail the events which led up to the act of secession.

"The storthing hopes that the Norwegian people will succeed in living in peace and on good terms with all, and not the least with the Swedish people, to whom we are linked by so many natural ties."

"The storthing is sure that the people will stand with it and with the government maintaining the full independence of Norway and with firmness and dignified tranquility submit to the necessary sacrifices; and it is further sure that all subjects will fully respect all ordinances and precepts from the government."

The act of secession came as the climax to the long standing controversy between the two kingdoms over the demand for a separate consular service—a demand which has always been resisted by Sweden.

Early in May the storthing forced a crisis by passing a bill providing for a separate consular system for Norway. This bill was submitted to King Oscar on May 26, and he refused to sign it.

On May 23 King Oscar returned the separate consular bill to the Norwegian ministry without his approval. The king's refusal was based upon the contention that the action contemplated must receive the sanction of the mixed council. The Norwegian council of state thereupon resigned, and the king refused to accept their resignation, as in view of the state of public opinion it was impossible to form a new government. Demonstrations were held throughout the country in favor of the action of the council of state.

Plans for the formal act of secession were carefully made, in order that the new provisional government would be inaugurated without disorder or even friction.

It became generally known throughout the city that the independence of Norway would be declared by the storthing on Wednesday, and there was an immense concourse of people around parliament house when the storthing assembled.

Method of Dethroning King.
The formal act of severing the union and of the dethronement of the king was taken with little debate, by the passage of the following:

"Whereas, all the members of the council of state have laid down their office, and

"Whereas, his majesty the king has declared himself unable to establish a new government for the country, and

"Whereas, the constitutional regal power thus becomes inoperative, the storthing authorizes the members of the council of state to retire to exile, and to further notice as the Norwegian government the power appearing to the king in accordance with Norway's constitution and existing laws with those changes which are necessitated by the fact that the union with Sweden under one king is dissolved in consequence of the king having ceased to act as a Norwegian king."

The storthing then proceeded to elect a provisional government, and to declare the independence of Norway.

SAY SURRENDER WAS DISGRACE

Nebogatoff's Ships Were in Good Condition When He Gave Up Control.

Japanese Ships Had Not Disabled the Vessels and His Magazines Contained Plenty of Ammunition to Make a Defense.

London cable: The Tokio correspondent of the Daily Telegraph sends interesting additional details of the naval battle, received from Moji, Sasebo, and other points.

It is stated that when Rear Admiral Nebogatoff surrendered the Russians hoisted red flags on their torpedoes, with Russian flags below them. The crews were drawn up in parade order on the decks, and some of the sailors were waving white flags. The whole affair, the dispatch says, was a "comprehensive spectacle."

The correspondent who witnessed the battle says that toward sunset, when the fighting was most fierce, there were some sickening sights.

The Sasebo correspondent saw exhausted, fugitive sailors striking on places beneath high cliffs in remote and deserted parts where there were no roads. All of them were thirsty, hungry and overworked.

Two Japanese cruisers alone saved 600 Russians.

Refugees in Hiding.
The same correspondent says that when the Japanese boarded the torpedo boat destroyer Bedovi, after completely disabling her, Admiral Nebogatoff was the last man to be discovered. He was hiding at the bottom of the destroyer, which was bleeding freely from many wounds.

The correspondent goes on to say: "It is understood that Admiral Nebogatoff, who is grateful for the kind treatment given him by order of the mixed council, has been allowed to proceed home within a few days. His survivors, though the guns were rusty and the bottoms of the vessels were covered with seaweed, there was no lack of fighting resources. There were heaps of ammunition, and no trace of damage by the Japanese shells."

Another correspondent of the Daily Telegraph says that the captain of the cruiser Dmitri Donskoi, the Russian flagship, admitted the foolishness of trying to force the Tsushima straits. He said:

"The Japanese navy is the finest in the world. The crews were so cool and brave as to appear almost like demons and not humans."

The crew of the cruiser Ural described how three successive twelve-inch shells completely disabled the vessel and sent her to bottom inside of forty minutes. All stories, the Telegraph's correspondents say, contrast the accuracy of the Japanese gunnery with the wild firing of the Russians, who were outwitted and outmaneuvered at all points.

It is stated that the Russians would be off Tsushima the following morning, and knowing that all his preparations were complete, slept soundly.

Refugees' Fatal Swoon.
The Tokio correspondent of the daily Mail sends the following:

SHERMAN SCORNS WASHINGTON
Lieutenant Governor Not a Candidate to Succeed Congressman Warren.

Springfield, Ill., special: Lieutenant Governor Sherman has denied the report that he is a candidate for congress to succeed the late Colonel Benjamin F. Marsh.

"I have no use for Washington," said Mr. Sherman. "I would rather be a member of the Illinois legislature than a member of congress. There is not the slightest foundation for such talk. I would not go to Washington."

ILLINOIS BANK
VAULT BLOWN UP

Mystery Surrounds Explosion of Dynamite in Edgar County.

BOOKKEEPER'S ARM IS BROKEN

Employer Declares He Was Standing in Window on Opposite Side of Square When Flying Brick Struck Him Below the Elbow.

Paris, Ill., June 9.—The Edgar County National bank building and vault in this city was almost completely wrecked by dynamite Thursday morning and the police declare the affair is shrouded in deep mystery. No motive for the deed has been discovered and as no money was taken the authorities doubt that the vault was blown for the purpose of robbery. Whoever did the job did not know how to measure the power of the explosive or intended to make a complete wreck of the place. The banking business, while the building was being remodeled, has been conducted in another place, but the old vault and safes were still used. The vault seemed to have been blown from inside, as its walls were thrown out and the structure obliterated. The partition walls of adjoining buildings went down and window panes for blocks were broken.

The stocks of the Bradshaw jewelry store and Wetzel's shoe store were damaged several thousand dollars by the falling partition walls. The contents of the bank vault were strewn about the street and buried in the debris of the building.

Money Intact in Safes.
The bank's funds were not blown in two safes standing near the vault, and these, while overturned, held the contents securely. The officers of the bank said no money was missing and that there was about $50,000 in the safes. The bank books and about 200 safety deposit boxes were buried in the wreckage.

So far only one man has been found who was in sight when the explosion occurred. He is Daniel Wiegart and he says that he was on the northeast corner of the public square. The bank is on that side of the square. He says that immediately following the explosion he saw a man run across the square.

Walter Jungten, the bank's bookkeeper, in telling of his peculiar connection with the explosion, says he was sitting up with a sick child in his apartment on the opposite side of the square, and when he heard the explosion he rushed to the window. Just then he was struck by a brick, which broke his arm below the elbow. The distance the brick would have traveled by being blown from the bank building would be 300 feet. The court house is about 100 feet from the bank.

Police Claim to Have Clue.
The police and the sheriff's force began work at once, and it is said a private detective also is working on the case. The police say they have a clue.

Vice President Terrance Clark, who is in charge of the investigation, recalls that a few months ago a stick of dynamite was found under his porch, the source of the anthracite region, which was not recovered. There are some fears of the bank explosion which indicate that it was done through malice and not with the motive of robbery.

The police were notified that a man had been seen going in the direction of the gravel bank south of the city and the patrol wagon and several officers were sent in pursuit of the stranger, who was said to be armed with a Winchester rifle. He was not inclined to connect him with the explosion.

Later in the day it was reported that the discovery was made that a quantity of dynamite was missing from the Gormley hardware store. At the store the statement was denied.

The chair was sold by Gen. Washington to his family physician, Dr. Craik, and members of the Craik family gave it to Gen. Jackson.

Grave Situation Develops Over Murderers Committed in Arabia.
Vienna cable: Die Zeit's Constantinople correspondent reiterates the story that the Italian government has sent two warships to the coast of Yemen, Arabia, and refuses to withdraw them until the Turkish government makes amends for the murder in Yemen of Italian subjects. This Turkey's lack of sovereignty in Yemen makes impossible. The situation is considered grave.

LANE K. SALSBERY PAYS FINE
Former City Attorney of Grand Rapids Is Assessed $2,000.

Grand Rapids, Mich., special: Lane K. Salsbery, former city attorney and the people's chief witnesses in the bribery trials of the city officials, is supposed to have resulted from drinking from the contents of a bottle supposed to contain brandy. The girl died several hours before her mother. A note was found on the table beside the bed of Mrs. Meyer, which reads: "Self everything, give the dead a decent burial. In the purse is $25.56. A search of the house by the assistant coroner failed to reveal any trace of poison. A further investigation is being made.

FLOODS DAMAGE
BADGER TOWNS

Loss About Fond du Lac Is Estimated at From $300,-
000 to $500,000.

WASHOUTS ON THE RAILWAYS

Wisconsin Central, St. Paul and Northwestern Roads Suffer—Boats Replace Street Cars as Means of Transportation.

Milwaukee, Wis., dispatch: The storms that have swept Wisconsin at most continuously for several days have caused widespread damage. In the neighborhood of Fond du Lac the loss has been especially severe, being estimated at from $300,000 to $500,000. The Elkhart dam broke Tuesday and the water rose rapidly. Every street in the city is covered with water. Many people were taken out of second story windows with row boats. Every street in the city is closed except the Wells shoe factory. The Moore & Galloway company lost 100,000 feet of logs, and only one train left the city Tuesday. There are five washouts on the Chicago and Northwestern road.

Schools Forced to Close.
The Fond du Lac river and its branches are raging torrents, sending the water over the banks for miles. Part of the city is now practically cut off from Lake Michigan, and all the schools are closed.

The Chippewa river at Chippewa Falls has risen ten feet and is two and a half feet above the danger line. Houses and barns in the lower part of the city are flooded. Two deaths from drowning have occurred. Clarence Cleaver, a log driver, and Paul Lamont, a schoolboy.

Seen washouts are reported on the Wisconsin Central and the Chicago and Northwestern. The St. Paul road has not had a train in or out of the city since late Monday night. Two hotels in the flooded district can be reached only by boat. Street cars and the interurban line to Oshkosh are out of service.

Railroads Are Washed Out.
At Eau Claire there has been much damage to railroads. The Omaha road has made plans to run a passenger train of the Wisconsin Central, which left here Tuesday, is held at Marshfield, where a bridge is out at Amherst Junction.

No trains have been run on the Chippewa Valley division of the Chicago, St. Paul and Milwaukee nor the Soo line.

At Barton four bridges are gone and the route to accessibility only from the west. Both dams are out and it is feared the grist mill and wooden mill will go. The dam and mill at Paskin and a dam and large grist and planing mill at Prairie Farm are gone. The buildings are valued at $10,000.

Dynamite was used on Taylor dam in an attempt to save the grist and wooden mills. The railroad bridge just east of the city has been washed away and the large bridge across the Menominee river is likely to go. The water is still rising. The damage will be over $5,000 to the city.

Other Mill Dams Go.
Six hundred acres of planted corn at Chilton has been ruined and cattle had a narrow escape from drowning.

A cloudburst at Newton drowned many cattle. The railroad track is inundated. The rivers are rising fast and a number of small bridges have been carried away.

At Sheboygan Falls the storm has caused great damage to the business district. The Brickner Woolen Mills company's dam was carried out, entailing a loss to the property of $10,000.

At Sheboygan the Arndt roller mills, on Pigeon river, sustained a loss of $15,000. The Frome manufacturing plant at Howard's Grove was washed out and all the factories' yards are under water.

Where the train was wrecked at Cumberland, fatally injuring three trainmen. At Portage traffic is at a standstill. Lightning played havoc, and Haskell's general store at Endicott was burned to the ground. The burning of a barn cost three horses and several cattle. Reports from all parts of the state including Barron, Eau Claire, Waubesa, Wisconsin, Waterbury, West Bend, Clinton, Eau Claire and Ladysmith, show that the calamity is general.

To Inspect Military School.
Springfield, Ill., dispatch: William H. Nevens, county superintendent of schools of Will county; Col. William Fieldhouse of Chicago, inspector general of the I. N. G., and Dr. James A. Egan, secretary of the state board of health, were appointed a committee to visit and report on the Highland Park military school.

CHAPTER XII.

"Had I Wist Before I Kist?"

I returned to the Blue Boar, my spirits again soaring. I found there awaiting me a footboy with a scented note. It was from Lady Dwight, and in it she invited me to her house upon the following day.

What should Lady Dwight, a person I had never seen, and the mother of the man who was my cherished foe, want of me, I conjectured.

The next afternoon, as I dressed to go there, putting on white satin breeches, flowered waistcoat and point lace, Gill watched me with a sober face, lending a helping hand whenever I needed one. Presently he took a rapier from the rack against the wall, and striking an attitude went through many of the old tricks we had oft practiced at home, saying, "Don't remember this and that?"

I was undecided between two cravats; I tried on first one and then the other, finally deciding upon the first. When I had knotted it to my satisfaction I looked at him lazily. His solicitation was becoming annoying, and all on account of the duel I had told him I was booked for.

"Fave done, Gill, have done," I cried impatiently. "The glitter of that steel makes my eyes to water. Wouldst have me attend on Lady Dwight—wherever in the devil she is—with red eyelids?" Then, as he persevered, I demanded, "Hast a confidence in thy pupil?"

"I like it not," he said. "If you should give him his sculetus there would be a hue and cry throughout London, and then I would not give a pinch of salt for the reinstating of the house of Waters."

"Ah, I see. 'Tis not over your pupil you are so concerned, but over the other fellow," I said banteringly. "I promise you I will not kill him, as you are an anxious, Gill, he must be one of your old friends' sons meekness, you are so mawkish over him."

"Kill him and be damned, for all I care," he said. "It is about Lord Waters I am concerned."

"You are right," I nodded, turning myself about before the glass, "and I shall only slightly wound him for the sake of a pair of blue eyes I would not like to put an end to the butterfly existence of 'Goush Raoul.' A goodly dose of steel, however, might lumber up some of his cursed pride."

"Men are not always so fortunate in doing exactly as they wish when fighting for their lives, he retorted."

"I told you, sir," I replied with dignity.

"Men are as well versed in dueling here in London as in the old Manxshire Long Hunt. It is at the door, outside of London, in that they are equally expert."

I would not take time to argue the point, and went to the stables, Gill following. My sedan chair was waiting and I put myself into it, although I liked not its swaying motion. It was like a ship rolling on the ocean, or a dromedary leaping along the sands, and its smallness of the sandy desert made me feel as though I were in a church pew. But I was too fastidious to go on foot and off we started, leaving Gill leaning against the hotel of the lun door, with a long face. As we turned the corner I looked back. I saw him give a shiver to his shoulder and enter the inn in order to the winds.

I gave the order to the chairmen, "Lady Dwight's." They seemed familiar with the lady's name and residence. When they set the chair down and I stepped forth I was surprised to find that they had stopped in front of the house I had visited yesterday—

"The house of Mistress Rosemary Allyn," he held her levee. The men assured me that it was the residence of Lady Dwight, and I was abashed for the moment. I trusted I should not again meet that lady's son.

What position did Mistress Rosemary Allyn occupy in that household? It looked not at all like a dependent or degraded one. Gads' room! It matched not to me. Were I King Copthorn and she the beggar-maid I would still win her love, and be honored by it.

I followed the footman in buff and gold liveries to the door of her boudoir. There, crouching on a fur rug, was the quaintest little negro innigable, a negro black as ebony and all of a grain.

"The gentleman am 'spected," he said, rolling his eyes and bowing to the floor. He opened a door.

"The gentleman, Missy," he cried, and again making his bow lower, if possible, than before, vanished.

The lady was seated before the fireplace. A hand screen protected her delicate face from the rosy glow of its flame.

I bowed before her and then looked up. Another surprise! Lady Dwight was the world-worn beauty whom I had escorted into London!

She was exquisitely attired in some sort of gray cloth, soft and clinging, embroidered in delicate pink buds. She never wore any other color, and I learned how many varying shades of gray there were, and how one might wear but one color and yet have a diversity of attire. Her hair was dressed in a negligence. Beautiful gray hair! And she had patches on her face. She was also rugged.

I kissed the hand she extended to me—I trusted she had not heard of

I had lost my heart in a case of gowd. And joined it with a silver pin.

Lady Dwight now took the opportunity to ask me many questions about my home. She should have stopped that silvery babble flowing from those wine-colored lips of my love had she wanted rational answers.

"You said you came from what part of England?" she queried.

"I do not just hear her—and she had to repeat her question."

"The southern part of Sussex," I managed to say.

"One of the Waters of East India fame?" she asked.

"No, I believe we do not boast of descending from that branch of the family," I murmured. "Waters of Long Haug."

"Your father," she whispered, "is he dead? I cannot bring him to mind."

"No madame," I answered, "but he has not been in London for years—Roderick Waters."

"And I myself were dead and gone!" she sweet voice sang on, my eyes were glued to her face. With a little cry she flung down her lace. I followed her glance of distress. It rested on Lady Dwight, fallen back in her chair, dead!

For a second there was great excitement, maids rushing hither and thither with smelling salts, wine and spirits; calls for a chirurgeon. Upon the lady's regaining consciousness I made my adieu, and her words, "What did you say to her?—she has not fainted so in years," ringing in my ears.

WISCONSIN LEGISLATURE

RATE COMMISSION.

In a rather irregular, but what is believed to be an effective, way the assembly put its finishing touch to the bill creating a state commission for the regulation of railroad rates. The bill came over from the assembly with a message to the effect that the upper house had refused to concur in the assembly amendment requiring railroads to keep their passenger deposits open fifteen minutes before the arrival and fifteen minutes after the departure of trains. On motion of Mr. Bradock, the bill was referred to the railroad committee. There was much confusion, during which the speaker recognized Mr. Bradock, who read from the bill the amendment. The speaker said the bill was a good one, and he was willing to have the lower house concur in it. He made a motion to that effect which was carried. The chief clerk realized the irregularity of the proceeding and in order to straighten it out as far as possible and make the record clear, he got Mr. Bradock to make out a written report later, which was recognized as having been received before the motion to recede had been adopted.

Save Fair Grounds Measure.

The bill appropriating $50,000 for improvements on the state fair grounds in Milwaukee was in jeopardy, but was saved by prompt action on the part of Mr. Crowley. Mr. Norcross first voted in favor of the bill. Later he changed his vote and voted against it, and, believing that the Milwaukee delegation was not united in favor of it, changed his vote from nay to no. Other members followed in quick succession until it looked as though the bill would be lost. At this point Mr. Crowley got up and called Mr. Norcross' attention to the fact that the Milwaukee delegation had voted against the bill. It was not a Milwaukee measure, but one that concerned the entire state, as it simply provided for preserving the state's property, Mr. Crowley said.

Anti-Lobby Measure.

At the request of Senator Kreutzer, Senator Whitehead introduced a substitute for the Johnson anti-lobby bill, which was ordered printed and laid over. The substitute specifies that it shall be unlawful for any person employed for a pecuniary consideration to act as legislative counsel or legislative agent or any officer, agent, appointee, or employee in the service of the state of Wisconsin or its counties or cities, or to influence any member of the legislature to vote for or against any measure pending therein, affecting the interests represented by such person, otherwise than by appearing before the regular committees thereof, when in session, newspaper publications, public addresses, or the like.

Prohibit Taking of Passes.

The bill prohibiting public officers from accepting railroad transportation in exchange for service of any kind was ordered to third reading in the senate by a vote of 15 to 14. Mr. Kreutzer thought that the bill was too broad in scope. It would prevent newspaper publishers from accepting railroad transportation in exchange for advertising if they held any public office. It would prevent an employee of a railroad company from accepting transportation over such road if he held a public office of any character. Mr. Sanborn spoke for the bill. Senator Frear supported the Johnson anti-lobby bill, reading from the governor's recent message and reiterating the charges made concerning the alleged corrupt practice of the railroad lobby.

Reaffirm Rate Commission.

The rate commission bill had an irregular ending in the assembly Wednesday. Fearing that the proceedings of the day before, which were generally regarded as irregular, might leave a loophole through which the act might successfully be evaded, Mr. Bradock, chairman of the railroad committee, moved for a roll call on the question of concurrence in the amendments and the bill was returned from the senate. This was accordingly had, and all members present—seventy-nine—voted in the affirmative. This is firmly believed to be the "last touch" of the assembly to the bill.

Music Hall for Milwaukee.

The first step looking to the erection of a large auditorium in Milwaukee since the destruction of the Exposition building was taken by the assembly when the Reahr bill, No. 1778, was concurred in. Before that action was taken, however, the bill was amended upon motion of Mr. McGilvray giving the city larger authority than under the original measure.

Aids Health Association.

The assembly concurred in the senate bill to appropriate $1,300 to the Wisconsin Health Park association.

Telephone Bill is Defeated.

The senate disapproved of the uniform rate telephone line, the passage of which was so strongly opposed in the assembly. The bill was refused passage by a vote of 14 for and 15 against.

More Time to Sign Bills.

Senator McGilvray introduced an amendment to the proposed change in the constitution, giving the governor six days in which to sign bills instead of three days as at present.

Vari-colored Ballot is Killed.

The senate bill providing for the adoption of the Dunn vari-colored card ballot was killed after a stirring discussion. Mr. Welch made a strong fight for the measure, but he was outvoted. The bill was killed by a tie vote of 33 to 33.

Sustains Governor's Veto.

The governor's veto of the bill providing for the examination of insurance companies at state expense was sustained in the assembly by a vote of 58 to 8.

Increases Judges' Salaries.

After a spirited debate, the assembly concurred in the Wright bill to increase the salaries of circuit judges from $4,400 to $5,000 a year.

Inspector for Rural Schools.

The assembly passed the Warner bill creating the office of state inspector of rural schools.

Institutes for Teachers.

The assembly passed a bill to appropriate $9,000 for county institutes for teachers.

Money for Graded Schools.

The assembly concurred in the senate bill to increase the annual appropriation for graded schools from $60,000 to $80,000.

Drainage Bill is Advanced.

After a spirited discussion the drainage bill was ordered to a third reading in the assembly. Mr. Carpenter sought to have it so amended as to prevent the draining of lakes and streams in central Wisconsin, but the amendment was rejected by a vote of 52 to 23. Mr. Bradock was the principal advocate of the bill. Its purpose is to provide for the draining of swampy and low territory at the expense of the owners of the property benefited. The vote on ordering the bill to third reading was close, being 39 to 27.

Amend Crowley Bill.

The Crowley bill relating to dependent and delinquent children, which had been recalled from the executive office by the assembly, was amended so as to meet the objections of the governor, who had refused to approve it. The principal amendment permits the county board to fix the salary of the chief probation officer. The bill relating to the municipal court of Deloit was amended in some slight particulars so as to meet objections of the governor and was then repassed.

Governor on Watered Stock.

The governor sent to both houses of the legislature a long message recommending that the state be clothed with authority to prevent corporations from over-capitalizing their property. A bill passed by the assembly some time ago to prevent railway stock or bonds except upon approval of the state rate commission. The present communication is thought to have been elicited by the fear that the senate will not look with favor upon such legislation.

New Road to the Coast.

A new transcontinental road has been opened to Los Angeles, California. It is the San Pedro, Los Angeles & Salt Lake Railroad, popularly known as the "Salt Lake Route." A branch line, established by the Union Pacific, connects Salt Lake City, the famous Mormon capital, every evening at 8:30. All transcontinental roads from the Mississippi and Missouri rivers, or the Great Southwest leads to Salt Lake, and as they arrive early in the day it affords ample opportunity for a stop-over in this, the most interesting city of America.

Statistics derived from the highest possible authorities are sufficient to establish the claim of San Francisco that it is the financial New York of the Pacific coast. They also point clearly to the observing person the fact that much greater things are in store financially for San Francisco. Many prominent persons in all parts of the world believe that San Francisco is destined to become eventually one of the great money centers of the world. There are sufficient facts to make interesting, and possibly instructive, a consideration of the possibilities of the future in this direction.

HILL ESTABLISHES A LIBRARY
$5,000 to Wisconsin University.

James J. Hill, the well-known railroad magnate, has just presented the University of Wisconsin with the sum of $5,000 with which to secure a special library of books relating to railroads and transportation. This gift of Mr. Hill's is the result of the interest he is taking in the work of Prof. Charles H. Meyer of the department of economics of the university, who was recently appointed editor of the history of transportation that is to form a part of the "Economic History of the United States," the completion and publication of which has been undertaken by the Carnegie Institution at Washington. Before sailing for Europe recently, where he is collecting material for a comparative study of European and American railroads, Prof. Meyer had occasion to interview Mr. Hill, and the latter was so impressed by the importance of the work which Prof. Meyer has undertaken, that he placed at his disposal $5,000, with which to begin the collection of books, pamphlets and other material that will be necessary for the preparation of this monumental work. The collection will be placed in the university library, and it has been suggested that it be known as the "James J. Hill Library," although the name and other details in regard to the disposition of the fund have not been settled, owing to the fact that Prof. Meyer is still in Europe. The preparation of this important history of transportation is expected to extend over a period of five years, and the Carnegie Institution has made a grant of $15,000 for the purpose of carrying on the work.

WOULD TIE UP ITS BUSINESS.

Railroad Manufacturers Say Street Show Interferes With Employees.

The Miller company, which employs 300 persons, has entered a protest against the Racine city council granting a permit for a parade to take place on the city street. The firm says it will result in great loss and damage to them, for the reason that its employees would stop work to look at the show. When a street fair was held last year the factory was obliged to close in the afternoon on that account. The city proposes to leave the ground in question for $100. Should the show be attempted there will be injunction proceedings to stop it.

Purses for Jefferson Races.

The Jefferson County Fair association has decided upon the following purses for the fair to be held Sept. 26, 27, 28 and 29:

Trotting: 3-minute class, $200; 2:20 class, $100; 2:25 class, $100; 2:30 class, $100.

Parling: 2:10 class, $300; 2:17 class, $100; 2:21 class, $200; 2:27 class, $200; 2:30 class, $200.

All sold, $1,100 will be turned up for racing. One thousand dollars was voted for other attractions and $2,000 worth of improvements ordered on the grounds.

State Suits Are Continued.

By agreement of the representatives of all parties interested the suits brought by the state against several railway companies for the forfeiture of over $100,000 for alleged failure to correctly report their gross earnings to the state for taxation purposes and which were to come up in the circuit court at Madison for trial Monday, were continued until next Monday.

Green Bay Driving Matinee.

The opening matinee of the season of the Green Bay Riding and Driving club will be given on Thursday afternoon on the last day of the Eagle's state convention at Green Bay. The Eagles have offered $100 in prize for the best turnout in the parade to take place before the races. The convention opens Tuesday.

Seek to Break Will.

Damage Suit is Settled.

The injury damage suit of the estate of the late State Senator Christian Sagan of Oshkosh vs. the Chicago & North Western for $5,000 has been settled out of court. It is understood that a compromise price of $2,000 was agreed upon.

Girl Under Truck Wheels.

Two wheels of a heavy truck wagon passed across the body of Mabel Quinn, 10 years old, of Racine, and she is still alive and apparently little injured.

QUESTION HARD TO ANSWER.

Student Knew of Fact, but Where the Explanation?

Dr. Hopkins, teacher, and president for many years of Williams college, was especially happy in the classroom. His method was to set up one after another of the students to get their views upon the topic under consideration. He delighted to lead a student on from point to point until he found himself involved in some ridiculous situation.

The president on one occasion, taking up a card from the table, called the name upon it, "Smith," "Smith," he said, "do you think this is the distinguishing feature between man and other animals?"

"Man is the only animal who laughs,"

"Very well." Taking up another card bearing "Jones," Jones stood up. "Jones," he said, "what do you think of the proposition of Smith?"

"I do not accept it," I find when I have been absent some time and return home that my dog really laughs when I take him up on my knees."

"When one laughs he laughs at something, does he not?"

"Yes, sir."

"Well, Jones," said the president, "tell me what your dog was laughing at?"

At the conference of the managers of the New York Central Lines, held in New York June 6th, all lines being represented by their General Managers and Passenger officials, it was decided, beginning Sunday, June 18th, to quicken the speed of the "Empire State Limited," so as to make the time between New York and Chicago eighteen hours instead of twenty hours, the New York Central Lines having made the twenty hour time during the past three years, and having also made the run between New York and Chicago in twenty hours with their "Express" train for the one hundred and eighty days of the Columbian Exposition in Chicago in 1932, twelve years ago.

The New York Central Lines make the point that the New York Central has had in service the "Empire State Express," which has been the fastest train in the world for its distance, 440 miles for fourteen years, having held the world's record for that time, and for three years and 180 days has held the world's record for a thousand mile train in twenty hours.

The proposed schedule of eighteen hours is simply the extension of the time of the "Empire State Express" through from Buffalo to Chicago, a time having been made for fourteen years between New York and Buffalo.

On this new schedule, the train will leave Chicago at 2:30 p. m., arriving Grand Central Station, New York, at 9:30 next morning, and returning will leave New York 8:30 p. m., reaching Chicago 8:30 a. m. following day.

At the same time, the "Lake Shore Limited" will be quickened up an hour, and will make the time from Chicago to New York in 23 hours in the case of the "Lake Shore" and 24 hours in the case of the "Empire State Express."

The "Southwestern Limited" train, No. 11, which now leaves Grand Central station at 1 p. m., will leave Grand Central at 2:30 p. m., saving 24 hours to an hour and a half on the present journey to St. Louis and Cincinnati.

The Eagles have offered $100 in prize for the best turnout in the parade to take place before the races. The convention opens Tuesday.

Seek to Break Will.

Charging that his daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Monte Schulte, kept John Gehring of the town of Freedom in a stupor during the last five weeks of his life, Appleton relatives have instituted suit to set aside the will and make an equal disposition of the estate.

Chicago Man Delivers Address.

W. Willard of Chicago delivered the commencement address at Rochester academy at Burlington. A class of eleven was graduated.

Boy is Fatally Hurt.

William Wyolohn, 8 years old, was struck by a street car at Racine, and fatally injured, while health to be respected and honored. These women who have undisputed claims to distinction exercise more discretion, and their chief displays are on those occasions when it is congruous to emphasize their social power and influence. Thus to the end we have the same connection between ornament and money which has existed from the beginning.—London Saturday Review.

Jasperson-Whitlesey.
This afternoon at the home of the brides parents in Cranmore occurs the marriage of Miss Harriette Whitlesey to Clarence Jasperson of Port Edwards. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Staff of this city, the ceremony occurring at 2:30 o'clock.

Miss Reta Cleveland was maid of honor and Misses Kate Smith and Della Jones were the bridesmaids. Harry Whitlesey acted as best man, and the wedding march was played by Miss Edith Lynn.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. S. N. Whitlesey of Cranmore, and is well known in this city, where she has a large number of friends. The groom is a resident of Port Edwards and is also well known in this city and vicinity, where he is well liked by his associates, and is looked upon as a coming young man.

A large number of friends from this city attended the wedding, and in order to accommodate the unusual number that was going down a special car was attached to the noon train and switched off at Cranmore, and brought up on the evening train.

The contracting parties have the best wishes of their many friends in this vicinity, and the Tribune unites with them in extending congratulations.

SHAVE YOUR LAWN

AN unkempt grass plot looks like a man who needs a shave, but the smooth lawn greatly improves the appearance of any dwelling.

If your lawn needs a shave, a Ball Bearing Thowas Mower will be a good investment for you.

It will stay sharp, push easy, cut smooth and last long. Let us show you one and you will be convinced.

her eyes you may think, if you wish, that her grace is stultified.

She replied "Ja," to Pastor Treumann's inevitable question in a tremulous whisper, which made the battle-flags of sadness and gloom, heaved no slight stately delight. The Kronprinz said "Ja," as if it were an order to take a salute. I saw Prince Warsagawa, whose features were not mobile, smile at that "Ja."

The English delegation was staring at the Duke of Connaught, whose appearance, as he made the elegant bow, was still but splendid German officers. Mme. von Goltz-Wieckert, the Kron Prinzessin's lady of honor, seemed to admire immensely the great train of silver cloth on her mistress's gown. It was embroidered with purple and red, and the young crown-princess, Prinzessin-Schweinfurth, they are delicate artists.

Count Bismarck Bohlen, the Kronprinzessin's chamberlain, looked at the Emperor, who needs a painter like Rembrandt to do him justice. These Russian cameras do not tell the glowing tenderness of the Emperor's glance. The Kronprinz with a rough energy which was admirably affectionate, and the Kronprinzessin with refined delicacy.

The Empress' look was troubled for an instant, but she raised her head to suppress her emotion. To attain the same end Count Hohenkammer, captain of the castle, and Alexander Spolke, His Majesty's chamberlain, were ordered to suppress her emotion. To attain the same end Count Hohenkammer, captain of the castle, and Alexander Spolke, His Majesty's chamberlain, were ordered to suppress her emotion. To attain the same end Count Hohenkammer, captain of the castle, and Alexander Spolke, His Majesty's chamberlain, were ordered to suppress her emotion.

Reid Given Good Advice.
At the farewell banquet tendered Ambassador Reid by the New York most advice be could offer the new ambassador was that given to St. Clair McKelway by two negroes who found the Brooklyn editor hemmed in a very close space by pieces of wreckage in the south two weeks ago. "Now," said the negroes to Mr. McKelway, who Mr. Reid pointed out of generous grith, "you just push yourself ahead, but don't spread yourself."

Waited Over Immigration.
Mr. McCall, secretary of commerce and labor, holds the view that the immigration problem is the most serious that faces the country, it is the difficulty being the question of distribution. A few days ago he received a letter from Louisiana saying that state alone can give employment to 100,000 workers in the field. The western portion of the Mississippi valley stands in equal need, but concentration in the cities goes on steadily. He thinks it is time for congress to take action.

Has Sweet Potato Farm.
For three days on the Garrison farm at Elmer, N. J., there was a "sweet potato party," at which 105,000 plants were set out and the work ended like the husking of the old day, with a feast. The plants cover forty-four acres.

Queen Sympathizes With Japan.
Queen Margherita of Italy, widow of King Humbert, is one of the few royal personages of Europe who sympathize with Japan.

John Kendrick Range once ran across a gift copy of one of his books at a second-hand bookshop, still having this inscription on the flyleaf: To his friend, J. M. G., with the regards and the esteem of J. K. Range, July, 1899. Mr. Range bought the copy and sent it to his friend again with a second inscription beneath: "This book, bought in a second-hand bookshop, is represented to G. with renewed and reiterated regards and esteem by J. K. Range. December, 1899."

Men Who Draw Large Salaries.
James H. Hyde's $125,000 salary drawn from the Equitable company, has called attention to the enormous salaries of the officers of the big insurance companies. First, second and third vice-presidents of all the big companies receive more money than the president of the United States for a year's work and they are not obliged to entertain half so lavishly. Covered up offices of them are the daily well in the matter of living and spending money.

Inebriates' Homes Useless.

the present stage of the dispute between Norway and Sweden it is rather odd that two world-famed as explorers, seem to be the chosen spokesmen for the two countries. Dr. Hansen is Norwegian and Dr. Sven Hedin, the famous explorer of Asia, is taking Hedin's side. These two men, both in their own lines of science, have got into a newspaper conflict, by trying his best to make the cause of his own country appear in the most favorable light.

President's Style of Speech.

Newspaper men who are accustomed to hear President Roosevelt's speeches note a marked difference in his style of delivery as compared with former years. When a candidate for governor of New York he spoke with rapidity than now, incorporating his remarks with extemporaneous phrases buried forth at astonishing speed. Now he speaks slowly and with evident realization that words will be quoted, and closely named all over the country.

One of Roman Metal Has the Distinctive Bronze Silt in It.

Some curious one has collected a mass of interesting facts concerning metallic pens, says the Buffalo Times. Some of these references run back as far as the fourth century, even the thirteenth century, and, curiously enough, in the case of the manuscript of Robert d'Artois, the forger scribe is said to have used a bronze pen in order to disguise his writing and make this deception more safe. A Roman metal pen is said to have been found at Aosta, not a mere styliis, but a bronze pen silt and there is some evidence of a pen of this kind having nearly as early as the invention of printing in the fifteenth century. More than a hundred years ago some steel pens were made in Birmingham for Dr. Priestly and some of these passed into the hands of Sir Josiah Mason in his early days with Mr. Harrison; but all seem to have been lost. The first pen of metal of a definite date, beyond all question, is one in a volume of books of 1717. At about the same time a political cartoon of Pope's refers to a "polished and golden pen," but these were evidently luxuries only, and it was not until seventy or eighty years ago that metallic pens became more generally in use. In the "Local Notes and Queries" in the Birmingham Weekly Post, definite evidence has been given of steel pens as early as 1806 and more commonly in 1817; and it was in 1824 that the first pen revolution came by which pens were made by a cheaper process—the hand-press which placed the pens from steel rolled into tube fashion, and the Joint formed the silt; but these required considerable labor to shape them into pen form. The use of the screw-press belongs to the period of John Mitchell, Joseph Gilbey and Josiah Mason, but the careful review of the above seems to be clear that John Mitchell has the best claim to be considered as the original introducer of successful pens.

The Railway Interest.

In a recent issue of the Kaethe Times, President Harding of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railway, in discussing the nature of things can it be shown, that the power to determine railway rates, given to a commission, would be a remedy of a very slight degree, to mitigate any of the evils of the transportation business which have been made the subject of our consideration. The already joined hands with the people in correcting many of the evils and eliminating many of the abuses, which have afflicted the people and the railways have suffered. The testimony of the interstate commerce commission is that under the present law excessive rates have practically disappeared, unjustly discriminated rates have been eliminated and relates have ceased to be a characteristic of the business and are equally being practically eliminated.

In every consideration of this subject, either in public or in private, I desire to be fair, to be just, to be candid, to be candid and individuals along the lines of the railways which I represent are of necessity members of the company itself. No more senseless and absurd appeal to the prejudices of the people and to the public press to convince people that the interests of the railways are adverse to the interests of the people, than to say that the railways could outfit traffic out of business communities sunk and abandoned by the sea. Market for Tree Stumps.
A new industry in the region at the head of the lakes is the gathering of the tree stumps for use in making the true braces. A large number of wooden ships are built every year, and it has been found that the most efficient corner braces are those made from these stumps and hunkies are shipped each every day to the shipyards. The stumps and hunkies of the stump are used in making the braces, and stumps from trees about a foot in diameter are found to be the best. The stump is taken from the ground and roughly cut into shape before being shipped. After its receipt at the shipyards it is made into a perfect brace. The cost of a carload of the stumps is close to $400, and the freight charges run over $100 a car.—Milwaukee Sentinel.

Notable Anniversary Celebration.
John Baker Shaw and wife, a well-known couple of South Connelleville, were quietly passing the fortieth anniversary of their wedding a few days ago when without any warning their thirteen married sons and daughters, twelve of their grandchildren, seven great-grandchildren and a lot of neighbors drove up and took possession of the place. The old folks did not feel rather hurt that no notice seemed to be taken of the day, but were overjoyed to have such a beautiful dinner, at the conclusion of which A. J. Shaw, a grand-nephew, drove up with Miss Sarah Buskner and a clergyman and was married. Altogether it was the most joyous occasion in that section for many a day.

The profits of authorship in Poland are not very great. It is said that no author except Sienkiewicz would refuse $2,500 for a novel, and two novels by Mr. Barrie brought to him more than all Sienkiewicz's books put together yielded to the Pole. The translator of a foreign novel gets for his work only from $25 to $50.

John Bright, will shortly start a new penny daily newspaper in London to represent the Liberal party. The paper will be called the Tribune. It will have $1,500,000 behind it and the new enterprise obviously betokens belief on the part of its backers that the Liberal party will be returned to power at the next general election.

RELATIONS OF THE BOYAR AND THE PEASANTS.

Land Owner and Land Cultivator
More Friendly Than is Generally Supposed—Timber Built Dwellings
the Rule in the Country.

In no country in Europe are the conditions of existence more strikingly national than in Russia. The idea carried away by the average visitor that Russian life is much like that in other European countries is due to the superficial impression, a failure to grasp salient features of the Russian national character. A visit to the country home of a Russian land-owner reveals the immense contrast presented by the life of the Russian noble in town and his more nearly normal existence on his estate. Nothing shows more clearly the difference between the Slavonic nature than his ready adaptability to either mode of life. The man seems transformed. Once back in the country the mask of the cosmopolitan dweller in one of the great capitals in the world, St. Petersburg, falls away like a worn garment and he is again a Boyar, like his forefathers.

A group of peasants, large or small according to the size of his estate, will be waiting to greet him on his arrival there. Their warm welcome to the khazvaren (master of the house) is evidently sincere, and as they bend reverently to kiss his hand, or press his feet in the case of the elder ones, just as they would have done on his days of servitude, he begins to realize the relations between land-owner and peasant are much more friendly than is generally supposed.

The heart of the average Russian land-owner, however, is not, and never has been in his country estate. This is his personal influence in his own locality, which would, no doubt, have been the development of a healthy national life that is possible under conditions, is almost entirely lacking.

Wood is the material employed in the construction of all buildings in the rural districts, with the possible exception of the churches. In the climate of Russia, where the average life of these wooden buildings is not exceeded, and where there are no cities like those of the old feudal nobles of England or of the continent, to connect past and present.

The timber-built dwellings of even the richest land owners in Russia have

IS ONE AS NECESSARY AS THE OTHER?

Citizens of Large Cities Say It Is

New York, June 13.—In the recent agitation here about the price of gas, the demand for lower rates was sup-

Acetylene is as dependent upon a supply of gas as upon a supply of good water.

It has come to pass that the day laborer uses gas as his only tried and approved, because of economy, and the merchant man uses gas on account of the convenience of its use in lighting, with the exception of improvements in burners, is cheaper, better and more satisfactory than any other kind of light. Gas sells at $1.00 per thousand cubic feet in large cities and from that to as high as $3.50 in smaller towns.

The consumer of gas in the country uses Acetylene (pronounced a set a len), and each one makes his own gas and is independent of gas and Electric Companies. Acetylene is a more perfect illuminant than the gas sold by the big gas companies in the cities, and the cost to the smallest user is about the equivalent of city gas at 85 cents per thousand.

Acetylene is the modern artificial light. In addition to the many inventions that have become daily necessities.

The light from an acetylene flame is soft, steady and brilliant, and its quality is only rivaled by the sun's rays. If water and a solid material known as Calcium Carbide are brought into contact the immediate result is the making of this wonderful gas. The generation of acetylene is so simple that experience or even apparatus is not necessary to make it. If it is desired to make it for practical lighting, and to keep it for immediate use, then a small portable acetylene "Acetylene Generator" is required. There are many responsible concerns making acetylene generators. In practice, this gas is distributed in small pipes throughout buildings, grounds, or entire cities and towns, in the same manner as ordinary city gas. Acetylene is the only satisfactory means of lighting buildings located in the country or in suburbs at a distance from city gas or electric plants.

STRANGE MISUSE OF A WORD

It is Found in the Application of the Term "Species."

Shenck's Magazine. In our newspapers, especially, we continually see such absurd statements as "The eagle killed a speckled species," and "The hawk caught a strange animal of the rarest species." However intelligent one may be to know that he cannot be so to speech. He must use correct words or be misunderstood. Herein we are all slaves. No one can dabble to be educated who does not know the meaning of the three terms, "fauna," "flora," "fauna," and "species." For instance, there is a group of order of birds, the grey-crowns, hawks, falcons, buzzards, kites and owls; and these are families under the name of eagles; but the eagles are differentiated as the golden eagle and the bald eagle; these are species. We have the sparrow hawk, peregrine falcon and the red tailed buzzard; each is a species. The newspaper editor should have some knowledge of the difference between a killed a species or a bird. This is good English. What he did say is nonsense. A genus is a group of lesser importance than a family, which may comprise many genera, and is too difficult of comprehension to be used with safety by the average reporter. But the true "species" is so simple that mislead is inexplicable.

Commerce Commission, in discussing the position to give to that Commission the power to regulate railway rates:

"I think the railways should make their own rates. I think they should be allowed to develop their own business. I have never advocated any law, and I am not now in favor of any law, which would put the railways, whether or not, into the hands of a commission or any other body. While it may be necessary to do so in some states at the present time, while it is done in some countries, I am opposed to it. I think the railways should make their own rates. The property of the railway has got. The result of it is property is not good for anything unless it can charge a rate. Now it has always seemed to me that when a rate was fixed, if that rate was an unreasonable rate, it deprived the railroad company of its property, and it is not necessary that you should confiscate the property of a railroad; it is not necessary that you should say that it shall not earn three per cent or four per cent. When you put in a rate that is above an unreasonable rate, you have deprived the railroad of its rights, of its property, and the Circuit Court of the United States has jurisdiction under the fourth amendment to restrain that."

"I have looked at these cases a great many times, and I can come to the conclusion that a railroad company is entitled to charge a fair and reasonable rate, if by order of a commission, if any statute of a state legislature takes away that rate, the fourth amendment protects the railway company."

The John Murtagh Brick & Tile Co. started up last Friday and the chances appear good for a prosperous season. Mr. Murtagh and his sons operate the plant with the assistance of several others. The clay is hauled to the factory in dump carts and deposited under cover of the shed. It is then shoveled into a disintegrator and after passing thru a carrier on a wide belt to the pug mill. After the clay has been thoroughly pugged it goes into the wire cut brick machine. When made they are piled up under a large shed to dry before being placed in the kiln to be burned. The clay is of a superior quality, rich and heavy. It has proved to be of splendid material for making tile and the Murtaghs will soon add tile making to the industry.

Mr. J. T. Barber of Irwinville, Ga., always keeps a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy at hand ready for instant use. Attacks of colic, cholera, diarrhea, dysentery, comes on so suddenly that there is no time to hunt a doctor or go to the store for medicine. Mr. Barber says: "I have tried Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, which is one of the best medicines I ever saw. I keep a bottle of it in my room and I have had several attacks of colic and it has proved to be the best medicine I ever used." Sold by Dally Drug & Jewelry Co.

HOGS IN THE CORN BELT.

The influence of Bacon Type Hogs into the Average Corn Belt Hog. Several years' experience as a practical breeder of Canadian bacon type hogs, followed by some years in the packing business, together with my recent experience as judge of bacon type hogs at the Louisiana Purchase exposition, serves as foundation for a few personal comments and observations on this topic.

TO DECIDE WHETHER BACON TYPE HOGS ARE OR ARE NOT SUITED TO GENERAL FARM CONDITIONS.

one must carefully consider the conditions existing in any particular locality and must then bear in mind those natural conditions under which the bacon hog thrives and gives the most profitable returns for the food he consumes. The present high excellence of Danish, Irish and Canadian bacon, while largely due to care in breeding and selection, also largely depends upon the abundance of such feeds as peas, barley and oats, which are rich in protein, or those feeds and constituents which make for the production of a maximum amount of lean carcass. In the American corn belt these feeds are neither abundant nor cheap in comparison with corn.

WHERE AMERICAN BACON IS MADE.

At present the best American export bacon is produced in our northwestern states where these cereals are cheaply grown and where there are available large quantities of cheap elevator and mill byproducts, and, further, the highly nutritious clovers and grasses grown in this cool northern country furnish cheap and suitable summer feed for the bacon hog. In view of the fact that corn is and will continue to be the great staple source of nutrition of the corn belt we believe it would be unwise to consider the adoption over these areas of a well defined bacon type hog.

THE INTEREST OF THE BACON TYPE.

I am satisfied that a desirable bacon type cannot be maintained on the corn belt under the present corn belt system of feeding, but without going to an extreme bacon type I know from actual experience and observation that a Yorkshire and Tamworth cross on the average corn belt hog would result in greater profitability, stronger constitution, vigor, better bones and ability to reach the killing pen in the packing house in good condition. YOUR AMBITION.

Keep It Stimulated and Do Not Permit It to Wane.

The idea seems to be pretty general that ambition is born in us, that we have little or nothing to do with its acquisition or cultivation and that we cannot modify, enlarge, adjust or improve it to any great extent. A study of life does not confirm this idea. The ambition is a cultivable quality, capable of being molded or destroyed according as we will, is demonstrated every day in the lives of those about us. We see people in whom the spark of ambition is kindled and who by the rendering of a book, the hearing of a lecture or the speaking of a kindly word by a friend or teacher, and, on the other hand, we see those who allow their ambition slowly to die out for want of fuel.

THE DEATH OF AMBITION IS ONE OF THE TRAGEDIES OF LIFE.

Every young man feels his ambition begin to fade there is trouble somewhere. Either he is in the wrong environment and his faculties protest against what he is trying to do or his health is poor, or he is being led into dissipation by bad companions. A youth whose ambition begins to wane is not in a normal condition. It is not an aimless quality, but a noble purpose and, with a desire to become a strong man among men, there is something wrong somewhere. Success.

Three of a Kind

Wouldn't seem to beat two pairs, in this case. But any old time of the game with a little party "just to make the play a bit more interesting" will tell you that they always are. But we aren't worrying about what can.

Beat Two Pair

one of a kind is all we have and all we want. Of course we've switched the subject and are talking about business now. Our own business, too. We aren't caring what.

Any One

else does in business. We intend to do the square thing. We aren't the kind to hold an ace or two up our sleeves. Our stock of Building Material of all kinds can't be beat. In other words it is a royal flush. If you ask those who have dealt with us in the past, they will tell you.

Will Tell You

that our Lumber, Sash, Doors, Blinds, Lath, Shingles, Mouldings, and everything else you could possibly use in building anything whatever are of the best. The best of everything. That's what we sell. Don't we get the jackpot?
